Trends and Hotspots of Political and Election-Related Violence in Delta State

Anticipated Trends and Dynamics

Intensified political mobilization and electoral disputes could heighten tensions, trigger violence, and erode public trust. Unresolved grievances and intimidation may further undermine security and peaceful participation before, during, and after the 2027 elections.

Actions Taken to Mitigate the Situation

Stakeholders, including civil society organizations, are promoting non-violence through peace messaging and community-led peace initiatives. However, sustained dialogue, timely grievance resolution, and better coordination remain key to reducing election-related violence.
